

Castles League News and gossip.

12th December –

I was worried that the tables were late as I was ‘visiting relatives’ prior to Christmas and lost valuable time. However, the dates match from last month so things were not as bad as I expected. Now to the news.

Welcome to all the new members who have entered since last month. All are welcome. Next, I should explain the notes attached to the tables.

‘T’, in red indicates the top scorer for a month. If 2 scores match, then both are top scores. If a score is entered that is higher than the top threshold for the division then ‘U1’ will be indicated, likewise if the score falls below the lower threshold then ‘D1’ will show. Having said that, it isn’t always good or unwelcome news as the tables look for two scores either below OR above the threshold before moving the member to another division. We do this to avoid bouncing around divisions and will be comfortable that you are suited to the division.

Regrettably December loses valuable shooting time, but I hope many manage to shoot enough to enter a score for December and the good news is that the year moves over shortly, and a new spring is closer each day that passes. A Merry Christmas to all.

12th November. –

To this date all the results that have been returned are now entered and collated into the tables. As previously, with two extra divisions available, some numbers per division seem small but this is because they are spread between multiple divisions.

I already have a score for November but will hold it until the next table build and there are some scores almost to the threshold for another division.

We have 240 archers taking part so far, this season and I must thank each one for making the league so competitive for all without it being “too” competitive.

I also have the “where-am-I” table so you can see where you have been allocated unless you have been registered for the league but not yet entered a score, where you will appear as “NEW”. This is an entry title that will prompt me for a division when a score arrives with me.

Sorry for the late delivery of the tables but October is always the month where I have maximum keying, plus delays by my time helping my club with the Indoor Open competition.

Keep shooting, keep trying. Please remember, if you attend an indoor competition and shoot a ‘Portsmouth’ round, that the dozens shot in that competition will be valid for the Castles League. Shooting is not only limited to shooting at your club.

Until December, my best wishes for shooting success.

Tony George.
